

InBIA Announces 2016 Category Award Winners

Eight Member Organizations and Five Member Clients Have Been Selected as Award Winners by the International Business Innovation Association

March 28, 2016 – (Orlando, Fla.) - The International Business Innovation Association (InBIA), a non-profit organization and advocate for advancing global entrepreneurship and incubation, has announced the category winners of the 2016 InBIA Awards. Each year, the Association honors business incubation programs, and their clients and graduates who exemplify the best of the industry. These organizations, and the companies they support, have made important industry contributions through their products, services, programs, and more.

InBIA's awards recognize overall excellence in business incubation, as well as member programs that have developed an effective innovation that helps the program better serve clients or accomplish its mission. The following members are category winners of the incubation awards:

- Accelerator Program of the Year - CTA@Boston \(Canadian Technology Accelerator\)
- Incubator Innovation Award - Innovation Depot, Inc.
- Mixed-Use Incubator of the Year - WT Enterprise Center
- Student Entrepreneurship Program - University of Northern Iowa John Pappajohn Entrepreneurial Center
- Technology/IT Incubator of the Year - Hong Kong Science and Technology Parks Corporation
- University Incubator of the Year - Innovation Incubation Center, Southern Taiwan University of Science and Technology
- Rural Incubator of the Year – Ohio University Innovation Center
- Food Incubator of the Year - Rutgers Food Innovation Center

“On behalf of the InBIA staff and board of directors, I would like to thank all of the member organizations and client companies that applied for this year’s awards. We had a great applicant pool, making it very competitive this year. I would also like to thank the judges for the many hours spent reviewing each submission to help determine the final category winners,” says Kirstie Chadwick, President and CEO of InBIA